DEAR FRIENDS,

At Towson University, we truly appreciate the many ways our generous donors have supported the mission and vision of our institution. Each and every day, the contributions of our alumni, friends, parents, faculty, staff, and students noticeably enhance our University.

This past year, our many generous donors combined to support Towson University with gifts exceeding $8.2 million. These contributions benefit our hardworking students, our talented and inspiring faculty, and our dedicated staff members. In short, your support has a profound impact on this institution and allows Towson University to continue to strive towards ever-higher goals.

There are many exciting projects on the horizon, and it is my sincere hope you will be inspired to return to campus, get involved, and continue your support. Your contributions, regardless of size, have enhanced Towson University. Thank you very much for your generosity and dedication.

Sincerely,

Brian J. DeFilippis
Vice President, University Advancement and Executive Vice President for the Foundation

Impact of Gifts to Current Operations

Food Insecurity Fund

Over 5,000 Towson University students are food insecure. Food insecurity is defined by the United States Department of Agriculture as a state in which “consistent access to adequate food is limited by a lack of money and other resources at times during the year.” The Food Insecurity Support Fund lessens some of this burden for TU students. Christina Olstad, Assistant to the Vice President for Student Affairs, explains, “Providing support to food insecure students has an immediate impact on the student and their Towson University experience. The fund provides an opportunity for students to have a deposit on their TU OneCard of up to $50 that they can use to access the dining halls on campus and purchase a meal. So far, we have served 23 students and provided $1,250 in meals.”

Smart Technology Grant

The Mid-Atlantic CIO Forum provided a multi-year grant to TU’s SMA Tiger Research Team. Spinal muscular atrophy (SMA) is a life-threatening genetic disease that affects how the brain and muscles communicate. The research team is designing, assessing, and developing wearable assistive devices and smart tech systems to specifically help children with SMA communicate, get around in wheelchairs, and control their environments. David Powell, the forum’s Grants Facilitator, says TU’s SMA research “is a great project to support. We hope that the technology can be used for other similar cases.” Professor Amanda Jozkowski explains that with the grant, the team has “conducted a needs assessment; developed a list of desired outcomes such as usability, durability, and customizability; explored different types of fabrication materials, switches, and computer components; and tested out set-ups for mounting sensors.”

Charitable Gift Annuity for Teacher Education

Patricia Hundertmark ’64 used her Towson education to teach history and social studies at Glen Burnie High School, in Saudi Arabia, and at Severn School. Coming from a lower middle class family, her degree provided her the chance to be financially comfortable, which is why she believes it is important to give back. She says, “it’s a great idea to support any institution that has made your life better.” She and her husband, Donald Hundertmark, have established a Charitable Gift Annuity (CGA) with Towson University. By transferring cash or property to a charity, such as Towson University Foundation, Patricia and Donald receive a fixed annuity payment for life as well as a partial tax deduction in the year they made the gift. The remaining balance supports Towson University’s College of Education when the last beneficiary passes.
Barnes-Harris Scholarship Endowment

The Barnes-Harris Scholarship Endowment honors Marvis Evon Barnes ’59 and Myra Ann Harris ’59, the first African American graduates of Towson University. This scholarship is awarded to an incoming freshman with a strong allegiance to the African American community who also demonstrates financial need. Towson University donors raised over $7,000 this past February, Black History Month, to increase the endowment. The goal is to raise an additional $10,000 in Fiscal Year 2018. This year’s recipient, Crystal Omari, says, “Towson University has always been my first choice. However, I had no idea how I would afford to attend. The Barnes-Harris Scholarship Endowment helped me afford college, and I am forever grateful.”

Ronald and Linda Raspet Summer Research Endowed Fellowship

The Ronald and Linda Raspet Summer Research Endowed Fellowship supports undergraduates majoring in chemistry, forensic chemistry, environmental science, or MB3 (molecular biology, biochemistry, and bioinformatics), who are conducting summer research in chemistry. Shelby Weatherbee was a 2017 recipient of the Ronald and Linda Raspet Summer Research Endowed Fellowship. Weatherbee reflects that “during my undergraduate summer research project, I prepared a grant proposal, presented at a national chemistry conference with scientists, and prepared a thesis summarizing my work to strengthen the field of inorganic chemistry. This work not only helped me be more competitive when applying for graduate school, but it also prepared me for the work I am now doing in my PhD program.”

Martha A. Mitten Memorial Professorship Endowment

For the past 10 years, the Martha A. Mitten Memorial Professorship Endowment has provided a professorship to a tenured member of the faculty in the College of Liberal Arts. With support from this professorship, Towson University Professor Bethany Brand, Ph.D. is leading the world’s largest treatment study of patients with dissociative disorders, a type of psychiatric illness caused by trauma. Brand developed a research lab to study dissociative disorders, brought world-renowned speakers to Towson University to give talks about trauma, and is hosting a fund-raising conference about treating traumatized patients. In the last three years, Brand has published 33 research papers. Brand was recognized in 2017 with a USM Regents Faculty Award for Research.
