Dear Friends,

This annual report, “Many People, Many Reasons, Many Ways,” looks back at the July 1, 2009 to June 30, 2010 fiscal year to recognize all of you who stepped forward in that time to show your support for the people and programs of Towson. It also highlights four donors who represent the diversity of reasons you give and the programs to which you choose to contribute. Their gifts and yours have had an impact at Towson, which you can also see on these pages. You have helped our students and faculty accomplish much this past year, and we are truly grateful.

And now, in December 2010, here we are already in the final year of the capital campaign, Growing a University. Growing our university has meant so many different things over the last few years – building our endowment up to its current $35 million, expanding scholarship support by $6 million, providing greater funding for faculty development, and supporting important new partnerships with the community.

With six months and nine percent to go to complete the campaign, we still need your help to reach our goal of $50 million in new support for our students and programs. Whether you support an existing student aid fund like the Towson Promise Scholarship, one of the colleges by naming a classroom or lab, or want to create something entirely new, your gifts, large and small, make a difference here at Towson.

I hope we will be hearing from you soon. Thank you so much again.

Greg Vermeulen ’84, Blazer Club member

For Greg Vermeulen ’84, giving to Towson is about much more than writing a check each year. As a member of the Blazer Club, he supports his alma mater from the stands and sidelines with his family all in black and gold.

“I give in a couple of different ways,” he says. “I support TU’s student athletes with my presence at games along with bringing as many people as I can. I also get my company to match a portion of my contribution.”

Here’s how your gifts are making a difference to students, faculty and programs across the university:

“I am the first child in my immediate family to continue my education, and I am ecstatic to have made it to the end of my undergraduate career. With your generous gift, I will be able to complete my senior year stress free.”

Danita Elkerson ’90, Founders Society member

When Danita Elkerson ’90 entered high school in Baltimore City, her classmates wanted to know if she was related to their favorite elementary schoolteacher, Vernadine Elkerson. That teacher they remembered so fondly is not only Elkerson’s mother, but also her inspiration for giving to Towson at the Founders Society level.

To honor her mother’s more than 37 years as a public school teacher, Elkerson created the Vernadine Elkerson Brooks Family Literacy Endowment in 2008. The endowment supports the TU Reading Clinic in its mission to help children who are lagging behind their peers in reading, and adults who never had the opportunity to learn to read and write. The clinic also gives TU students who are studying to be reading specialists hands-on experience in their discipline.

“Since my mom’s life’s work was rooted in her belief that all children deserve to read, the Reading Clinic seemed like an excellent match for recognizing the educational support that my mom gave to my sister and myself,” she says.

In addition to honoring her mother, Elkerson also gives back to Towson because of the generosity her alma mater extended to her at a young age. A Department of Justice employee, Elkerson credits Towson and the full scholarship she was awarded with helping get her where she is today.

“Towson moved me forward so that I could be in a position to make positive contributions to society and be eligible for great professional opportunities,” she says. “We should all continue that legacy of investing in education just as someone invested in you by helping you in any way to get through college. Material gifts can break, get lost, be forgotten, but helping someone to learn life skills continues to give beyond what anyone can see.”

The Founders Society honors donors who make annual gifts to any designation at Towson at a leadership level ($1,000 and above) as well as graduates from the last 10 years ($100 - $999 based on graduation year).
Greg Vermeulen

TU recruited Vermeulen for lacrosse; however, injuries prevented him from ever forging a TU athletic career. Through the Blazer Club he gets to relive his days on the field while introducing his three children to Division I sports.

Although Vermeulen has been within a mile of the university since graduation—working as a financial advisor for more than 25 years—he didn’t have much of a relationship with his alma mater until a friend approached him to join the club. Since joining, Vermeulen can’t imagine not being involved with TU.

“I have a lot of fond memories of my days at Towson,” he says. “It’s wonderful to be back around old friends that I haven’t seen in a long time. I’ve even convinced three of them to become members of the Blazer Club.”

Vermeulen encourages other alumni to give back, but also to cheer on their fellow Tigers on the field. “Joining the Blazer Club has been a lot more rewarding than I thought it would be,” he says. “Not only do I get to support our teams up close, but I’m giving back to my university, which is a great feeling.”

Members of the Blazer Club have made a $5,000 gift commitment to support the athletics program (payable over five years), and receive athletic benefits and a tailored blazer.

Daniel Popovich is proof that you don’t need to be an alumnus to understand the value of a Towson degree. For over 20 years, he has given to Towson annually to honor his daughter, Sheila Popovich ’81, supporting the university that helped his daughter become the successful business professional she is today. His consistent giving qualifies him as a member of Towson’s Golden Tiger Society.

“Once you get started, it gets contagious to give,” says Mr. Popovich, a retired petroleum engineer. “I’m giving to education, the greatest thing anybody can have.”

In addition to helping his daughter’s alma mater and more specifically

Daniel Popovich, Towson parent and Golden Tiger Society member

Larry Wimmers, assistant dean in the College of Graduate and Extended Studies, attended an international faculty development seminar in Australia last summer thanks to funding from the Faculty Excellence Endowment. “The experience allowed me to explore how Australian universities have developed new graduate programs in sustainability,” he says, and gave him both the information to form a similar program at Towson and the research contacts to initiate new projects in his laboratory.

“Without this scholarship, I would most likely not be able to attend college. And more than financial support, it shows that people do care about my education and want me to succeed. It inspires me to achieve success in my future so I can give back in the same way.”

the business program he remembers so fondly, Popovich has another incentive to give. His former employer not only matches, but also triples whatever gift amount he pledges. He hopes that his annual donation makes a difference for the Towson students who look to compete in today’s workplace.

“A college education in today’s atmosphere is a need,” he says. “It’s a must to make a living and have an enjoyable life. Towson is a good place to start.”

Elaine S. Mintzes, Towson friend and Tower Light Society member

Gifts to Towson take many forms and are given in many ways…from financial resources to volunteer time, from annual contributions to gifts carefully planned for posterity by our Tower Light Society members. In the last year, Towson had the privilege of accepting such a planned gift in the form of an exceptional collection of artwork, books, and religious and cultural objects for display and study.

With the express intent to educate and inspire faculty, students, renowned scholars and the community, Elaine S. Mintzes of Baltimore has planned a charitable bequest to Towson University Foundation, a collection of nearly 100 items of Judaica. Mrs. Mintzes has also bequeathed a fund for the display and maintenance of the collection.

Mrs. Mintzes and her late husband, Alvin S. Mintzes, are recognized for their service and philanthropy and deep commitment to humanitarian efforts. Many of the items in the varied collection were given to the couple to honor their generosity. Once received by Towson, these bequests will be known as the “Alvin S. and Elaine S. Mintzes Judaica Collection” and will be housed and displayed in Towson’s Albert S. Cook Library.

The collection includes several mezuzot, Torah crowns and sculpture, rare books and artwork. “Towson University is proud to have been chosen to be the steward of these artifacts that will respect, honor and celebrate the Jewish faith,” says Gary N. Rubin, vice president for university advancement.

Elaine S. Mintzes, Towson friend and Tower Light Society member

The Golden Tiger Society honors the loyalty and commitment of donors who support Towson— at any level and to any designation— for five or more consecutive fiscal years.

Towson friend and Tower Light Society member

The Tower Light Society recognizes individuals who plan for the future of Towson by including the Towson University Foundation in their estate plans.

“if you, someone I have never met, believes that someone like me is worthy of assistance, then I certainly will never stop believing in myself. Thank you for helping me to achieve my goals and fulfill my dreams. I won’t let you down.”

Roberta Lebo
Class of 2012

In summer 2010, with funding from the Jess and Mildred Fisher College of Science and Mathematics Discretionary Fund, 34 forensic chemistry students traveled to Vermont with Dr. Dana Kollman from Towson’s anthropology department. Dr. Kollman, a noted expert in human remains identification, had been invited by the family of a man who had disappeared in 2005 to begin investigating where authorities had left off. This effort provided an opportunity for TU students to gain valuable field experience, while helping to bring closure to the victim’s family.

Dr. Dana Kollman
Department of Anthropology
The 2010 fiscal year (July 1, 2009 to June 30, 2010) was a good one in terms of both fundraising and investment. Our donors, though dealing with the same economic challenges as the rest of the nation, sustained and even increased their giving in 2010. These gifts have been profoundly important to our students, some of whom would not have been able to re-enroll this year because of their own financial challenges.

Fiscal year 2010 also saw our investments rebound, regaining much of what was lost in the economic recession of 2008 and 2009. Though a number of our endowed funds remain underwater due to a sluggish fourth quarter, the outlook is positive for future growth. As of June 30, 2009, there were approximately 260 funds underwater by approximately $4.7 million. As of June 30, 2010, those numbers had improved greatly, with approximately 210 funds underwater by about $2.3 million. Furthermore, as of September 30, 2010, 127 funds were underwater by approximately $830,000.

Because of the prudent investment and the implemented procedures for calculating endowment spending, funding for the university’s activities continues even when the markets are down. Our current investment strategies and spending policy are allowing us to achieve our goals, and our scholarships and programs continue to impact Towson students and faculty in meaningful ways.

For the past two years, I have had the pleasure to work with a knowledgeable and passionate team of board members to steward your gifts to Towson University by managing the more than 745 funds currently supporting academic programs, scholarships and innovative projects at Towson. During that time, we were presented with unprecedented challenges, and responded responsibly and with a view for the long-term health of the funds that you have entrusted to us for the benefit of the university. I am grateful to have had the opportunity to serve my alma mater in this capacity and know that I leave the Foundation in able hands.

Thank you for your past and continued commitment to a great institution.

Dan McCarthy ’75 ’83
President, Towson University Foundation, Inc.
The Towson University Foundation currently manages 745 funds that support academic programs, scholarships and special projects at Towson University. The funds include 343 endowments that perpetually support scholarships and fellowships, professorships, art, athletics and many other programs. Of the 343 endowed funds, 268 support scholarships.

The endowment portfolio experienced an up year, returning 15.50%, as compared to our custom benchmark index of 14.79%. Last year, the portfolio returned –17.02%, as compared to the custom benchmark of –20.06%. Endowment gift revenues for FY 2010 totaled approximately $1,660,000. On June 30, 2010, the endowment investment portfolio's market value stood at $33,155,689, as compared to $27,760,054 at the same time last year.

Growing a University—The Campaign for Towson
Update, Year 6 of 7

Growing a University - The Campaign for Towson was launched on July 1, 2004 with the ambitious goal of raising $50 million in funds to build student scholarships and faculty development funds, create new partnerships and strengthen the university’s long-term support through endowment. Securing private funding for these areas is necessary for Towson’s continued growth and success.

With your generosity, we will reach our goal and give Towson the support it needs to grow. Thank you to all who have contributed at any level to the university throughout the campaign to date. Additionally, we are pleased to recognize those individuals, corporations and foundations below who have committed gifts and pledges of $50,000 and above to Growing a University – The Campaign for Towson.
